PAINTSVILLE — The girlfriend of a Johnson County man whose parents had been missing since September 2012 helped police locate the parents' bodies Friday on their Oil Springs property, recently filed court papers indicate.

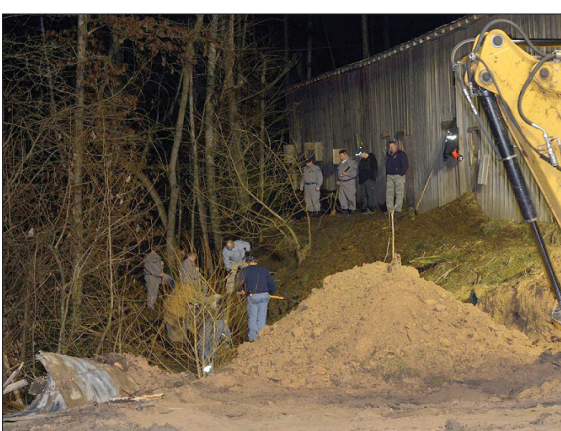

Johnson County Sheriff Dwayne Price issued a press release Tuesday in which he said he received a tip Friday, Feb. 22, as to the possible location of two bodies buried on the property of Larry and Sandra Kaye Blanton in Oil Springs. Acting upon the tip, he and his deputies, members of the Oil Springs and Rockhouse Fire Departments and the Johnson County Rescue Squad went to the farm.

"We were there for approximately nine hours," Johnson County sheriff's deputy Kevin Pelphrey said. "We dug by hand, and then J.R. Frisby obtained a backhoe and a small excavator."

Late Friday night, the release said, two bodies were discovered buried to the side of the Blantons' barn.

Johnson County Coroner J.R. Frisby said Tuesday afternoon that the bodies recovered on the Blanton property were positively identified as those of Larry and Sandra Kaye Blanton.

"The bodies are still in Frankfort, and until they are released to me I don't have any information to release regarding the cause of death," Frisby said Tuesday. "They told me that we shouldn't make any plans and that

Jail job applicant files lawsuit

LOUISA — A former applicant for the job of administrator at the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center filed suit Thursday against the jail board, seeking a declaratory judgment directing board members to install him as administrator immediately under the same terms offered to the current job hold as well as an award for costs and attorney fees.

Charles R. "Randy" Bowen, a Lawrence County resident, is also asking for a judgment against the jail authority for violation of the state Open Records Act.

Bowen said in his complaint filed by Attorney Brad Derifield that he submitted an application to the authority for the administrator's position and that he met each of the advertised requirements. The authority interviewed applicants for the position, including Bowen, before making its hiring decision, the complaint said.

On June 19, 2012, member Mike Crum from Martin County resigned his position on the authority, the complaint said, and on June 21, Martin County Judge-Executive, Kelly Callahan appointed Chris Todd to replace Crum.

The complaint said that Todd's appointment to the authority was never approved by the Martin Coun-

Saturday marks one year since deadly tornadoes struck

One year after deadly tornadoes ripped through several Eastern Kentucky counties, including Lawrence, Johnson and Martin, residents are still trying to put their lives back together.

Four people lost their lives in Lawrence and Johnson counties, numerous homes and businesses were wiped out or damaged, and huge sections of trees were leveled when multiple tornadoes struck the Big Sandy region March 2, 2012.

In Lawrence County, Joyce Williamson Chaffins, 65, and her granddaughter, Samantha Danielle Wood, 14, perished.

Wood was a ninth-grader at Lawrence County High School, and a member of the National Junior Honor Society and the percussion section of the school's band.

In Johnson County, Shawn Shepherd, 16, of Prestonsburg, and Gregory Perry, 20, of Hager Hill, both died in the storm.

The National Weather Service in Jackson tracked the tornado as it moved across Magoffin, Johnson and Martin counties. The tornado was rated an EF 3 on the Fujita Scale as it moved across Magoffin and Johnson counties but said it weakened to an EF 2 when it moved into Martin County, with wind speeds

Federal suit names Floyd attorney, retired judge

by Tony Fyffe
BSN MANAGING EDITOR

PIKEVILLE — A federal lawsuit claims a Floyd County attorney defrauded the federal government of millions of dollars in attorney fees from disability cases.

The suit, which was filed under seal in October and unsealed Tuesday, Feb. 19, in U.S. District Court at Pikeville, seeks to "recover fraudulently obtained disability benefits and attorneys' fees paid by the United States of America to Eric C. Conn and Eric Conn, P.S.C."

"The disability benefits and attorneys' fees obtained by Conn which are the subject of this qui tam all originate from a fraudulent scheme coordinated between Conn and a social security administrative law judge named David B. Daugherty," the suit says. "The fraudulent scheme involved Daugherty wrongfully taking control of a high number of Conn's clients' Social Security disability claims from randomly assigned administrative law judges and conducting sham proceedings, resulting in the Conn clients overwhelmingly and fraudulently obtaining successful results. For example, during fiscal year 2010 Daugherty approved 99.7% of all Social Security claims while the national average of successful claims were approximately 62%. The fraudulent scheme resulted in millions of dollars in fraudulently obtained attorneys fees to Conn."

Conn has offices in Stanville and Ashland, and his Web site touts his business as "America's Law Firm."

The suit, filed by two Social Security Administration (SSA) employees, says Conn violated the federal False Claims Act. Daugherty is also named as a defendant.

"Since no later than 2002, and continuing at least until Daugherty's retirement on July 12, 2011, Defendants engaged in a scheme to defraud the United States' disability programs through Daugherty's corrupt and unjustified awarding of disability benefits to claimants represented by Conn and Eric Conn, P.S.C.," the suit claims.

In the "initial step of the fraudulent scheme," the suit says, "Conn communicated to Daugherty identifying information of the Conn Claims."

"Daugherty routinely received faxes and other communications containing his identifying information from either Conn or others acting on Conn's behalf," the suit says. "Because of the HALLEX Rotational Requirement ... and (Chief Administrative Law Judge Charlie Paul) Andrus' directive that the Conn Claims specifically were to be rotated, only a portion of the Conn Claims were assigned to Daugherty's docket. One component of the Defendants' fraudulent scheme, therefore, was Daugherty's takeover of the Conn Claims not legitimately assigned him in rotation."

Daugherty "sought out and obtained control" of Conn's cases before and after a new docketing system, the Case Process Management System (CPMS), was implemented, the suit claims.

"Daugherty took control of the Conn Claims not routinely assigned to him by locating and taking physical possession of the claims' paper files from the desks, files, and workspaces of Hearing Office docket clerks, other ALJs (administrative law judges), and Master Docket cabinets," the suit says. "Both docket fraudulently obtained and cashed checks illegally from the water department account.

EIGHT: Martin County defendants plead not guilty

"Accountants found the money missing, and we were notified, so we initiated an investigation," Kentucky State Police Detective Jason Dials said. "I believe this is the first case we've had like this in Eastern Kentucky."

Those named in the indictments were Dennis Scott, 34, of Pilgrim; Melissa Perkins Hinkle, 28; Nannie Lucy Blackburn, 35; Colby Maynard, 26; Alvin W. Johnson, 28; Jerry L. Maynard, 24; Dahryl Justin Keller, 29; and Sean Keller 27, all of Inez. All eight are charged with engaging in organized crime, criminal syndicate. Sean Keller is additionally charged with second-degree persistent felony offender.

All eight pleaded not guilty to the charges during Thursday's arraignment.

According to the indictment, from August 2012 through October 2012, the eight allegedly committed, conspired, attempted to commit or act as an accomplice in the commission of theft by unlawful taking over $10,000 from the Martin County Water Board.

Discovery documents filed Thursday provide new information in the case. According to documents, Dials was notified Jan. 7 to contact the commonwealth's attorney's office regarding a complaint of someone having stolen a large amount of funds from the Martin County Water District. The complaint alleged that an employee for Sumpter Accounting Firm had stolen the money from August 2012 through October 2012.

Hinkle was named a suspect in the case.

Discovery also shows that Martin County Judge-Executive Kelly Callahan spoke to officers on the phone regarding the issue in October 2012, at which time he said he had been advised that the woman involved in the theft was alleging that she had been threatened by a man named Sean Keller and forced to steal the funds from the water district. Callahan was advised to contact the KSP post to ask for an investigation, but as of Jan. 7, no formal request had been made, according to discovery documents.

During the course of the investigation, Dials questioned Callahan, who advised him that he had become involved in the complaint after being contacted by Linda and Raymond Sumpter, and he advised him to contact them for more details in the case.

Dials contacted Linda Sumpter and during the interview was advised that Hinkle was the staff accountant and that she had been employed with their firm for approximately eight years. Sumpter also said that Hinkle was a former water district employee and was assigned to handle the water district's account.

Linda Sumpter said in her statement that the water district met on Monday, Oct. 22, 2012, and received an anonymous phone call from someone that said one of their clerks was issuing unauthorized checks to someone who wasn't a client. Although they didn't know if they were the right recipient of the call, they closed the office and began an internal audit, finding no issues until they went through the water district's account.

Linda Sumpter advised that one of the vendors was an associate of Hinkle and that by looking at just that vendor, they found $9,000. They called the water district superintendent, John Mills, and verified that Colby Maynard had done some work for the district but that the total amount should have been $1,500 to $2,000, so they began doing further research on Colby Maynard.

Hinkle was called, the statement said, and admitted that the checks were issued and she also gave them other names associated with the missing money, according to documents.

Linda Sumpter said Hinkle was in "terrible condition" and was "threatening suicide." Sumpter also said Hinkle never had the authority to write checks, but to only print them in an emergency and call the superintendent to get a signature from the commissioners.

Linda Sumpter said in her statement that Hinkle said they threatened to kill her and that is why she was giving out the money. Sumpter also said no other client's accounts were affected and asked Hinkle why she chose the water district account but received no response.

Hinkle was suspended from her position on Oct. 22, 2012, and terminated Oct. 25, 2012. Hinkle also admitted she had forged commissioners Nita Collier's and John Haney's signatures.

Linda Sumpter said in her statement that it appeared that Hinkle would put in a fake vendor's name and then issue the check to another non-approved vendor. Sumpter also said in her statement that her firm paid the district back with an average 6 percent rate and that her firm is now out the money from the theft. Sumpter said the district has been paid back in full.

Dials said in the report that he made contact with Pillersdorf Law Office, which represents Hinkle, to schedule an appointment regarding the case. Ned Pillersdorf had written a letter to the commonwealth's attorneys office saying Hinkle wrote checks to Sean Keller and that he has voicemail of Keller demanding money from the Water Department or Hinkle would be harmed.

On Jan. 10, Dials reviewed the checks, which showed Johnson a recipient of $1,720; Colby Maynard, $20,574.20; Dahryl Keller, $804.52; Scott, $1,682.47; Jerry Maynard, $3,623.36; Nannie Blackburn, $2,026.49 and Sean Keller, $1,390.

The checks were cashed at various locations in various counties and that the driver license number or ID number listed matches the name of the people signing the checks.

On Jan. 23, Dials interviewed Hinkle in the presence of Pillersdorf. Hinkle said it started with her then boyfriend, Colby Maynard, and that he and Sean Keller were having issues that may have been drug related and that Shawn Keller knew she worked in Sumpter's office and that was when the threatening phone calls began.

"Sean wanted money, but he never wanted checks issued in his name," Hinkle said in the interview. "Sean always wanted the checks issued in someone else's name."

Hinkle speculated that it was to keep him out of it.

Hinkle said in her statement that Blackburn, Jerry Maynard, Wesley Johnson, Dennis Scott, Colby Maynard, and Dahryl Keller were involved but that Colby Maynard was the main one and that he was the means for others to get the checks to cash them.

Dials also conducted several other interviews during his investigation and presented the case to the Martin County Grand Jury in late January, according to court documents. Indictments were returned in early February.

APPEAL: Supreme Court upholds murder conviction

sentenced to life in prison.

Two other men, David E. Jude, 34, and Jerry Lee Stepp, 29, pleaded guilty to manslaughter charges in the case and were sentenced to 12.5 years and 10 years, respectively.

The indictment claimed the three caused Blackburn's death on June 23, 2002, by "inflicting blunt force injury to his head and body." Authorities at the time said Blackburn was beaten beyond recognition and found in his wrecked car at Rockhouse in Tomahawk.

Officers found Blackburn in the back seat of the car and said that the car appeared to have been pushed over the hill, stopping only after getting caught on a small tree.

Blackburn was transported to Cabell Huntington Hospital in Huntington, W. Va., and three days later he was pronounced dead.

The case remained unsolved until Cornette, Jude and Stepp's indictment in 2010.

During Cornette's trial in Martin Circuit Court, Jude testified that Cornette told him Blackburn owed him money for drugs and that the two had words, then Blackburn pulled a hawk-billed knife and hit him with a stick and knocked him down, after which Cornette ran over him with a four-wheeler.

Jude also said that Cornette backed over Blackburn and ran over him and dragged him after he got stuck under the four-wheeler, then when he got free whipped him and went through his pockets before throwing him in a car and taking him to Trace Fork, where he tried to make it look like an accident.

Cornette appealed his conviction, claiming that Martin Circuit Judge John David Preston improperly denied a continuance, a change of venue and a mistrial in the case; that hearsay testimony was improperly allowed at trial; and that improper testimony was allowed during the penalty phase.

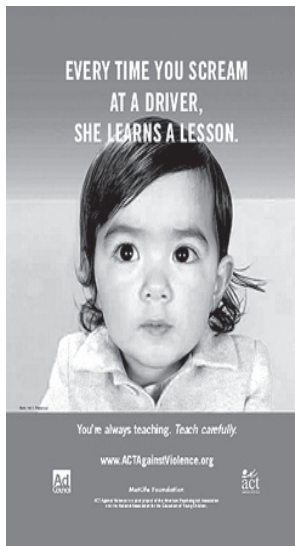

The Supreme Court, in a 7-1 decision Thursday, rejected all arguments, saying the judge did not abuse his discretion and finding no reversible errors.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice Daniel J. Venters said the trial court abused its discretion by refusing to grant Cornette a continuance in the trial. He said Cornette should have been given time to locate an eyewitness who had been identified by co-defendant Jude three days before the trial started.

"It took years for the Commonwealth to gather the evidence needed to make its case against Appellant; a few more months to locate an eyewitness to the crime is, in the broad perspective, a minor inconvenience to the Commonwealth, and to the accused, an essential component of his Constitutional right of Due Process and a fair trial," Venters said in his opinion.

Cornette is serving his sentence at Northpoint Training Center in Burgin.

BLANTONS: Couple's bodies found

they would try to have them back by Friday, so we should know something by then.”

Although a cause of death has not been released, Johnson County Sheriff Dwayne Price posted on his Facebook page that “the missing person investigation has now moved to a homicide investigation.”

Amanda Fannin, the girlfriend of the Blantons' son, William, apparently helped authorities in the investigation. Fannin, who was indicted last year on charges of flagrant non-support and promoting contraband, entered a plea agreement Friday with the commonwealth's attorney's office in exchange for her cooperation in the investigation, according to court documents.

“The Commonwealth believes that and the Defendant represents to her knowledge she is the possessor of information which the parties believe will enable the Commonwealth to prosecute William E. Blanton for causing the deaths of his parents, Larry Blanton and Sandra Blanton, and for concealing their remains,” the plea agreement says. “The defendant avers that she played no role whatsoever in the deaths of Larry Blanton and Sandra Blanton. She avers that knowledge of their deaths and any attendant circumstances came to her only after their deaths.”

According to the agreement, “It is believed that this information is known to no one else, and is therefore of crucial importance to the Commonwealth's investigation of the disappearances of Larry Blanton and Sandra Blanton. The Commonwealth acknowledges that the defendant's divulging of said information constitutes detrimental reliance by the defendant upon the plea agreement, as the importance of the defendant's information would be greatly diminished thereafter.”

Fannin agreed to provide the information in exchange for the commonwealth's dismissal with prejudice of the charges against her; agreement to not prosecute her for any crimes which she may have committed after she learned of the deaths of Larry and Sandra Blanton; and agreement to not prosecute her for any charges of which the KSP, Johnson County Sheriff's Office, Paintsville Police Department and Operation UNITE currently have open investigations pending, which at the time of the agreement are none.

The commonwealth also agreed to not seek criminal flagrant non-support charges against her for any child support arrearages owed through Lawrence County, according to the plea deal. The commonwealth will also agree and recommend to the court for the modification of the conditions of her release so that she may be placed in a 180-day rehabilitation program, such as Karen's Place in Louisa, and she will be responsible for securing funding for her rehabilitation placement through operation UNITE or other funding sources and if she has previously or is granted visitation with her children, then she may do so with them according to the rules of the rehabilitation facility.

The commonwealth also agreed not to seek the death penalty for William E. Blanton for any charges relating to the deaths of his parents.

“The Commonwealth is not by this agreement, forestalled from seeking other enhanced penalties for William E. Blanton,” the plea agreement says.

Fannin also “agrees to provide a full and complete statement concerning her total knowledge of the events surrounding the disappearance, presumed death (including manner and mechanism of death) and burial of Larry and Sandra Blanton, and agrees to provide testimony if necessary concerning her knowledge of these events,” the agreement says.

“All statements given by the defendant pursuant to this agreement shall be made in the presence of her counsel and shall be recorded,” the agreement says. “Should the Defendant fail to disclose a material fact known to her, knowingly give false information, or is later discovered to have been involved in the death of Larry and Sandra Blanton, the Commonwealth and defendant are released from this agreement with any information gained by the Commonwealth useable for any purpose.”

The plea agreement also says that “in the event the Defendant discloses information concerning the whereabouts of the bodies, that proves to be false, then both parties are released from this agreement, and any statements made by Amanda Fannin as a result of this agreement will be considered offered in proffer and not usable against her.”

“It is the intention of the Commonwealth and the defendant that the parties be forever bound by the terms of this agreement,” the agreement says. “Subsequent occupants of the Commonwealth's Attorney's Office or subsequent special prosecutors are intended to be bound by this agreement.”

Johnson Circuit Judge John David Preston accepted the plea agreement on Feb. 22, which was the same day he issued an order for the Johnson County Sheriff's Office to transport Fannin from the Pike County Detention Center to “an alleged crime scene”.

Fannin was also transported to the commonwealth's attorney's office on Monday, according to an order in the case file at the Johnson County Circuit Court Clerk's Office.

Funeral services for the Blantons were held Tuesday.

Sandra “Sandy Kaye Blanton, 54, is survived by her mother, Nora Blair; a sister, Lois Fraley; two sons, Anthony Dale and Willie Blanton; two step-daughters, Kimberly Borowski and Amanda Howard; four grandchildren; and a step-grandchild.

Larry Blanton, 61, is survived by his mother, Fay Blanton; two sisters, Shirley Blanton and Debbie Botner; three brothers, Gary Blanton, Melvin Blanton Jr. and Jerry Blanton; two daughters, Kimberly Borowski and Amanda Howard; a son, Willie Blanton; a stepson, Anthony Dale; three grandchildren; and three step-children.

Funeral services were Tuesday at Paintsville Funeral Home Chapel. Burial was in Williams Cemetery. Oil Springs United Baptist Church, Oil Springs, under direction of Paintsville Funeral Home, Paintsville.

CONN: Suit filed against attorney, retired judge

clerks and ALJs notified Huntington Hearing Office management that Daugherty was taking the Conn Claims.”

With the implementation of the CPMS, Daugherty “took control of the Conn Claims by manipulating the access and training granted to him through his participation with the CPMS implementation cadre,” the suit says.

“As a member of this cadre, Daugherty received special access and training that gave him the ability to electronically reassign cases to himself. Daugherty took this opportunity to reassign high numbers of Conn Claims to his docket in violation of the Rotational Requirement.”

Daugherty's “reassignments, however, were completed in a manner that was hurried and rushed leaving requisite factual and procedural information blank,” according to the suit. The reassignments caused the CPMS to report the incomplete fields as errors to supervisors of Jennifer L. Griffith, who was then a master docket clerk in the SSA's Huntington, W.Va., hearing office, and regional SSA officials, the suit says.

Griffith, who resigned in November 2007, and current SSA employee Sarah Carver are plaintiffs in the suit.

After the errors were reported, Griffith's supervisor accused Griffith of “creating the error and failing to correctly and timely docket and rotate incoming Conn Claims,” the suit says.

Griffith later discovered that Daugherty's reassignment of Conn's cases “created the error reports for which she was being blamed,” the suit says.

“She reported Daugherty's actions to her supervisors, and personally asked him to stop,” the suit says. “He did not and her supervisor failed to adequately respond to Daugherty's action.”

When Daugherty “seized control of a Conn Claim, he conducted a sham proceeding to make it appear that he was performing a bona fide review of the claim,” the suit says, and assigned contract hearing reporters “created audio recordings of the hearings.”

Unlike other administrative law judges, Daugherty scheduled his own “on-the-record hearings” and routinely held up to 20 such hearings for Conn's cases on the same day at 10-minute intervals, the suit claims.

Other judges who conducted “genuine hearings were able to schedule only six to eight claims per day, each lasting 30 to 60 minutes,” the suit says.

Other claim representatives began complaining that Daugherty's hearing procedures were favoring Conn's cases, and Daugherty responded by issuing on-the-record decisions, which are based on the existing record and are “used in exceptional circumstances,” the suit claims. Daugherty used such decisions for “virtually” all of Conn's cases, according to the suit.

“During his tenure as ALJ, Daugherty approved the vast majority of the Conn Claims, with a caseload two or two and one-half times greater than the average,” the suit claims. “For Fiscal Year 2010, for example, Daugherty reviewed 1,284 cases, and granted benefits in all but 4 (an approval rate of 99.7%). As a result of the fraudulent diversion and reassignment of cases to Daugherty, and his sham consideration of their merits, the SSA awarded disability benefits to Conn Claim claimants who would otherwise have not received them.”

The situation was the subject of a May 19, 2011, Wall Street Journal article, the suit says, and the plaintiffs also contacted the SSA's Office of Inspector General, which conducted an investigation. The offices of U.S. Sens. Orrin Hatch of Utah and Tom Coburn of Oklahoma also conducted an investigation, the suit says.

Among other things, the suit seeks a jury trial, damages in the “amount of three times the damages sustained by the United States because of the false claims” alleged in the complaint and civil penalties of $11,000 for “each and every false claim” that Conn and Daugherty “caused to be presented to the United States and/or its grantees, and for each false record or statement that Defendants made, used, or caused to be made or used that was material to a false or fraudulent claim.”

Reached by the media Tuesday to comment about the suit, Conn issued the following statement: “I have not seen any lawsuit or papers and cannot comment until I do. I can certainly say I have always tried to represent my clients in the best and most appropriate way possible within all the laws and rules. It is noteworthy that the U.S. Government studied this lawsuit for a year and a half and decided not to join it or get involved.”

In court filings, the government said it was not intervening in the case “at this time” and asked that the judge stay the suit and keep it under seal.

“The United States requests a stay because of the potential that litigation in this case would affect an ongoing criminal investigation of the same or similar facts,” Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General Stuart F. Delery said in court papers.

Judge Amul R. Thapar, however, denied the request.

Editor's note: A lawsuit represents only the plaintiffs' cause for action.

JAIL: Job applicant files suit against board

ty Fiscal Court. Later on the evening of June 21, 2012, the authority held its regular meeting, and among other items on the agenda, the board held a vote to determine who would be hired as the jail administrator, according to the suit.

Ten authority members, including Todd, attended the June 21, meeting, and member Nick Frazier made a motion to hire Pete Fitzpatrick as the jail administrator, the complaint said. Five members, including Todd, voted for Fitzpatrick and five members voted against him, the suit said.

Next, member Diane Watson made a motion to hire Bowen as the jail administrator, and five members voted for Bowen and five members, including Todd, voted against him, the complaint says.

Bowen said in the complaint that it appeared for the moment that neither he nor Fitzpatrick had won the vote and another board member, Rick May, made a motion to disqualify Fitzpatrick from further consideration due to “discrepancies in qualifications according to the advertisement,” the suit said.

Earlier in the meeting, members discussed whether or not Fitzpatrick had the required 10 years of law enforcement or corrections experience needed for the position, the complaint said, and the authority voted with five members voting to disqualify Fitzpatrick due to his lack of qualifications, and five members, including Todd, voted to not disqualify Fitzpatrick.

After the votes, the complaint says that Lawrence County Judge-Executive John Osborne pointed out to the authority that the Martin County Fiscal Court had not approved Todd’s appointment and that as a result, his appointment was not valid, rendering him ineligible to vote on any issues. After a lengthy discussion, the authority asked its attorney, Nelson Sparks to determine whether Todd was a validly appointed member before adjourning the meeting, according to the suit.

Todd sent a letter to Callahan on June 27, 2012, purporting to resign from the authority, the complaint said, and on June 28, 2012, Callahan reappointed Crum to the position, which was approved by the Martin County Fiscal Court.

Later that same night, the authority met in a special meeting. Pursuant to the authority’s bylaws, the authority must give three days notice of any special meeting, the suit said.

The notice of the June 28, 2012, special meeting included two agenda items: “hiring a new secretary for the authority,” and “signing the contract for the new administrator,” the complaint said.

On June 27, 2012, the authority attempted to amend the agenda for the June 28, 2012, special meeting without giving the required three days’ notice, the complaint said, and the purported amendment was to consider “hiring the administrator,” as opposed to “signing the contract for the new administrator.”

In addition to failing to give the required notice, it is “apparent” that some authority members did not receive the revised agenda before the meeting itself, the complaint said. After a period of “argument and infighting,” the authority voted at the special meeting to hire Fitzpatrick as the jail administrator, and the authority entered into a contract with Fitzpatrick for the position which he still holds.

Bowen said in his complaint that when the authority voted at the regularly scheduled meeting on June 21, 2012, the Martin County Fiscal Court had not approved Todd as a member of the authority and as such, he was not eligible to vote at the meeting.

Because Todd was not eligible to vote, his vote on the issues taken up by the authority at the meeting should not count, but the remaining votes by eligible authority members should be counted and the results should stand as if Todd had not voted, the complaint says.

If Todd’s vote is not counted, then the authority voted 5-4 not to hire Fitzpatrick, voted 5-4 that there were “discrepancies in qualifications according to the advertisement” with respect to Fitzpatrick’s candidacy and voted 5-4 to hire Bowen, the complaint said.

The authority attempted to amend the agenda for the special meeting, but it did not give three days notice of the amendment and did not provide the notice to all its members, the complaint said.

The authority took up business at its June 28, 2012, special meeting that was not on the original agenda, namely voting to hire Fitzpatrick, and never took a vote to override or nullify its vote on June 21, 2012, to hire Bowen as the jail administrator, the complaint also said.

The complaint said the court should declare as a matter of law that the authority held a valid vote to hire Bowen as the jail administrator, that it never voted to nullify or override its vote to hire Bowen and that its vote to hire Fitzpatrick was invalid because it was not on the agenda for the June 28, 2012 special meeting.

The court should declare as a matter of law that Bowen be installed as the jail administrator immediately and further order the authority to do so, the complaint said.

Bowen also said in his complaint that he made a written request to the authority pursuant to Kentucky Open Records Act to inspect certain books and record and that the authority did not reply to the request in writing but instead gave him copies of “certain records,” with no explanation as to what he was being given or what was being withheld, and it was clear that some documents requested were not produced, the suit says.

In an attempt to obtain the documents the authority did not produce, on Sept. 25, 2012, Bowen made a second written request under the Open Records Act and the authority again failed to reply to his request in writing, the complaint said.

Instead, the authority gave Bowen copies of certain records with no explanation as to what he was being given or what was being withheld, the complaint said.

The authority violated the Open Records Act when it failed to respond to Bowen’s requests in writing in a timely manner and as a result, Bowen is entitled to recover from the authority the costs of the action, his reasonable attorney fees and a monetary award to be determined by the court, but not to exceed $25 per day that he has been denied the right to inspect the requested records, the complaint said.

of up to 158 miles per hour and a path width of three-quarters of a mile wide.

The tornado that moved into Lawrence County had a maximum wind speed of 138 miles per hour and a path width of 200 yards.

Martin County Emergency Management Director Lee Gauze said residents in his county are still rebuilding.

“There was no government stuff torn up,” Gauze said. “There are people still rebuilding, some of them have moved to the other side of the county, or moved to another county. The cleanup from the homes that were damaged or destroyed is also ongoing. Some of the people are still dealing with their insurance companies. I know that on Coldwater, one house is just now getting rebuilt. The damage will be visible for years.”

Long-term recovery team chairman Mike Ellis in Lawrence County said that there were originally 540 Federal Emergency Management (FEMA) applications directly related to the storm, and most were for hail damage. About 35-40 that were either destroyed or severely damaged, and most of those residents are now back in their homes, he said.

Ellis has been working to obtain federal grant money for many of those affected.

“We had up to one half million for the county. Most have received $10,000 to $20,000,” Ellis said. “There are two local contractors who have been doing most of the work and it’s slowed some, but they are hoping as the weather improves, things will pick up. There were some students from Johnson City, Tennessee that came up in the summer to help. They are a faith-based group of young people and it’s with the Appalachian Service Project. They came up and stayed in the basement at the school for the summer so they could work. They have adult supervision and a lot of good people working for the community. They are planning to come back this year and by the time they leave, we should have it pretty much done.”

Ellis said that People’s Security Bank has also been very helpful in acting as a go-between with a bank in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Lawrence County Judge Executive John Osborne said people were originally giving the county private donations for the victims, which they set up in a special account, but that all the money was transferred to the recovery team so more work could be completed.

“I hope it don’t ever happen again,” Osborne said. “Most of the people didn’t have insurance, and if it hadn’t been for the recovery team, we wouldn’t have gotten as much done. There is no way without good volunteers.”

In Loving Memory
Sherril Stevens

Today I sit here all alone
I keep wondering why God called you home.
It seems like some days never end,
while others just begin.
I know you are in a better place but I still miss your smiling face.
There will be new bodies for all of us up there,
nothing will be able to compare.
Walls of Jasper, streets made of pure gold,
Oh, what a sight to behold.
God says 'welcome home' when we all get there,
what a moment we will all share.

Love,
Your Wife, Children and Grandkids

Erase a vengeful ex from your digital life

by Kim Komando

Kim Komando hosts the nation's largest talk radio show about consumer electronics, computers and the Internet.

Breaking up is hard to do. It's even harder in the age of the Internet and social media. Many former spouses, partners, boyfriends and girlfriends now seek digital revenge.

This could be done by posting fake messages on the ex's social media, or even posting intimate photos and messages for everyone to see. Some people go to great lengths to destroy their ex's reputation.

It doesn't help that people leave themselves wide open for attack. A recent survey conducted by online security firm McAfee revealed that more than 50 percent of people share account passwords with their partner. Plus, 1 in 3 surveyed saw nothing wrong with sending their partner racy images.

Here's why that's a spectacularly bad idea: The survey also found that 28 percent of people who have sent intimate photos or videos have regretted doing so. One in 10 say an ex has threatened to post racy images online. Also, 84 percent have had to change passwords after breakups.

What can you do to protect yourself when it looks like you're headed for a breakup?

First, change the passwords for all your social networking accounts. If your ex knows those and gets in first, he or she can change your passwords and block you out. A vengeful ex could then start posting nasty things under your profile. Cleaning it up isn't easy.

Once the breakup is official, you probably won't want to see your ex popping up all over your Facebook and Twitter feeds, or to give them the opportunity to post on your profile. Go into your accounts and block the ex.

If your ex knows the passwords for any of your email or financial accounts, be sure to reset those, too! You probably should anyway, as partners often know more than you think.

It might be best to start fresh with a new email account at Gmail or Yahoo! Those email providers make it easy to transfer your address book and update all your friends and family members.

Set a new password or PIN code for your computers and gadgets. Make sure the app includes a tracking feature that allows you to remotely wipe information if either is stolen.

Remember to create strong passwords. That means avoiding using words and numbers that you used during the relationship.

Delete any revealing photos, intimate text messages and email from your computer and gadgets.

If you share a computer with your partner, transfer your personal photos, music and important project files to an external hard drive or a private cloud-based storage account.

Taking these steps will help secure your privacy and personal information.

Unfortunately, there isn't much you can do if you have sent your ex racy photos or steamy texts. Once you hit the send button on an email or text, it's out of your hands and out of your control.

A private video or photo shared with even one other person by a vengeful ex can quickly spin out of control and be seen by thousands in a few hours. Once it's out there, you

Ladies in Red event held

PAINTSVILLE — February is Heart Disease Awareness Month, and Highlands Health System, in conjunction with the Johnson County Health Department, held its third Ladies in Red event of 2013.

Over 145 guests were in attendance, making it Highlands' most widely attended Ladies in Red yet.

Heart disease education began with Debbie Ousley, director of Cardio Diagnostics at Highlands Health System, who identified the most common heart disease risk factors and recommended lifestyle choices, such as smoking cessation and 30 minutes of exercise per day, to help reduce risks.

Following Ousley, Kristal Bradley, project coordinator for the Heartburn Center at Highlands, spoke on the signs and symptoms of a heart attack. Bradley says that many people believe they can drive themselves to the hospital when having heart attack symptoms. Instead, she advises not to put yourself in more danger by driving, but instead to call 911. The topic shifted to diet and healthy eating habits with Carol Stapleton, registered dietician for the Johnson County Health Department. Stapleton suggests starting your day with a whole grain cereal, as an easy way to get your recommended fiber intake. She also encouraged attendees not to focus on what to eliminate from their diet, but instead to add more and more healthy foods every day, such as adding veggies to spaghetti and tofu to lasagna in place of ricotta cheese.

Wrapping up the presentation with a motivational discussion on the importance of exercise was Ernest Brewer, director of physical therapy at Highlands. Brewer, who admittedly had a sedentary lifestyle in the past, shared how his life had vastly improved since becoming very active and exercising on a regular basis, including how he had reduced his risks for heart disease and has less aches and pains.

Often mistakenly considered to affect mostly men, heart disease is the number

Dr. Jain honored

PRESTONSBURG — Among the select few physicians honored with the prestigious Patients' Choice Award this year is Dr. Kirti K. Jain.

In fact, of the nation's 870,000 active physicians and dentists, just five percent consistently received top scores from their patients on sites like Vitals (<http://www.vitals.com>), qualifying them for this honor in 2012.

Jain has won the Patient Choice Award five years in a row while Dr. Fadi Hayek has done so for four of the five years. They are the only oncology team in the tri-state area to receive the prestigious "Patients' Choice Award" from 2008 to 2012.

Millions of patients go online each year to rate their doctors on various components of care, including accuracy of their diagnosis, the amount of time they spent with the doctor, and the doctor's bedside manner and follow-up care. Patients' Choice reviews these rankings and other quality measures to compile its yearly list of award winners.

For more information on

Jain, visit his profile on PatientsChoice.org.

Following the publication of Jain's selection for the Patient's Choice Award, American Registry seconded the honor and added Jain to The Registry of Business Excellence.

PBH hosted educational program for diabetics

PAINTSVILLE — Drew Rainwater delivered a free educational program at Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center to share diabetes self-management and lifestyle strategies based on extensive training and his personal experience living with diabetes during PBHRMC's Diabetic Support Group meeting on Monday, Jan. 21.

Rainwater is a member of the A1C Champions Program, supported by Sanofi, which is a patient-led approach to diabetes education. A1C Champions® know first-hand the challenges and obstacles to maintaining control of their diabetes.

During the program he covered topics including achieving good glucose control, learning about effective self-management, developing a balanced, healthy lifestyle, planning and prioritizing diabetes management, overcoming fears surrounding diabetes, and finding resources for diabetes support.

Diabetes is a chronic, widespread condition characterized by high blood sugar in which the body does not produce or properly use insulin, the hormone needed to trans-com every Tuesday, devotion-al with Will Ruthven, noon-1 p.m.

Appalachian Hospice Care, Inc., serving Johnson, Floyd, Martin, Magoffin, and Pike Counties, has opportunities for special people to assist with the volunteer program to serve the terminally ill and their loved ones in the Big Sandy area. For information, call the Hager Hill office, 606-789-3841, the Pikeville office, 606-432-2112, or toll-free, 800-998-9144.

Lawrence County has mandatory garbage service, and your animals need to be properly tagged. To report dumps or make animal complaints, call 606-638-9600.

The Prestonsburg OET and Pikeville hours of operation: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m.; Thursday, 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m.; and Friday, 8 a.m. to noon. The Kentucky Office of Employment and Training (OET) is part of the Education and Workforce Development Cabinet.

port glucose (sugar) from the blood into the cells of the body for energy. It is estimated that that nearly 26 million people in the United States have diabetes, including an estimated 7 million who remain undiagnosed. At the same time, about 40 percent of those diagnosed with diabetes did not achieve the blood sugar control target of A1C, 7 percent recommended by the American Diabetes Association. The A1C test measures average blood glucose levels over the past two- to three-month period.

"If there is someone that is struggling with diabetes or has an A1C that is 6% or above, it is imperative to provide motivation to take those first steps to better blood glucose control. Diabetes patients need to know they are not alone and there are people who can help them along their journey with diabetes", said Sherri Blair, R.D., L.D.

The Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center's Diabetic Support Group meets on the third Monday of every month at 7 p.m. in the PBHRMC cafeteria. For more information, contact Blair at 606-789-3511.
